

The Canadian Field-Naturalist

SUPPLEMENTARY MATERIAL:

Wintercesses (Barbarea W.T. Aiton, Brassicaceae) of the Canadian Maritimes
Colin J. Chapman, C. Sean Blaney, and David M. Mazerolle

FIGURE S1. Bitter Wintercress (Barbarea vulgaris), with characteristic slender, relatively long stylar beaks (>1.5 mm long) and spreading silicles. Photo: Alain Belliveau.

FIGURE S2. Small-flowered Wintercress (Barbarea stricta), with short and stout styler beaks (<1.5 mm long) and appressed silicles. Photo: David Mazerolle.

FIGURE S3. Small-flowered Wintercress (Barbarea stricta), with dentate upper stem leaves and ciliate auricles. Photo: Sean Blaney.

FIGURE S4. Small-flowered Wintercress (Barbarea stricta), with relatively short petals (<4.5 mm long). Photo: David Mazerolle.

FIGURE S5. Large-fruit Wintercress (Barbarea orthoceras), with pinnatifid uppermost stem leaves. Specimen: National Herbarium of Canada, Canadian Museum of Nature (CAN 60422). Photo: Canadian Museum of Nature.